Postponement of Minimum Wage.

a. Is the postponement of Minimum Wage legal?

Yes. The procedure of postponement of minimum wage is regulated in Minister Decree No 231 Year 2003. Companies need to follow the procedure as described in the regulation to get the approval from government

What is the Procedure?

To get approval from Governor, a company needs to follow below steps:

- Negotiate with the Union or Workers Representative that represent more than 50% of the workers in the company.
- Have their past 2 year's financial statement audited by Public Accountant and submit the result to government
- Describe their past 2 year's production and marketing status and their plan for the next 2 years to the government
- Propose the number of workers that will have their minimum wage postponed and the period of postponement. Maximum is 12 months.

Governor may request for additional financial audit to be conducted to a certain company as necessary. The Governor will request for advice from Provincial Wage Council (Depeprov) on the postponement request from companies and then the Provincial Wage Council will provide recommendation to approve or to reject the proposal of minimum wage postponement and submit the recommendation to the Governor.

Can a company request to pay lower wage than the previous year's minimum wage, if it is agreed by workers?

No. The decree specifically provides 3 options that company can use for postponement of minimum wage proposal:

1. Company can pay their workers using the same amount with previous year's minimum wage
2. Company can pay their workers using a higher amount than the previous year's minimum wage, but lower than the current year's minimum wage
3. Company can increase their workers' wages gradually throughout the year

The decision from Governor will include the length of time use for postponement of minimum wage as proposed by the companies. It may last for only several months of the year or maximum 1 year depending on the proposal from companies and the recommendation from provincial wage council. Once this period expires, company needs to pay their workers using the new minimum wage

How long does it take to get the approval?

Maximum 1 month after submission to government

During the process of postponement application, how much should the company pay the workers?

The company needs to pay the workers using the same amount they use in the previous year

When the minimum wage postponement application are approved or rejected, how should the company react?

- When the request is approved, the regulation requires the company to use the new approved compensation starting from the first day of the new minimum wage applied. Thus the company will need to pay the balance of payment retroactively as needed.

For example:

Previous year's minimum wage is Rp. 1,500,000,-

New minimum wage amount is Rp. 2,000,000,- starting January 1st 2013

Proposed wage amount of minimum wage postponement is Rp. 1,800,000,-

Approval/Rejection of postponement from Governor released on March 1st, 2013

If the postponement proposal is approved:

Company will need to pay the balance amount of Rp, 300,000 per month in January and February 2013.

So the total payment in March 2013 will be:

Rp. 1,800,000 (approved wage amount after postponement) + Rp. 300,000 (balance amount in January 2013) + Rp. 300,000 (balance amount in February 2013) = Rp. 2,400,000.

The amount of wages from April 2013 onwards will remain as Rp. 1,800,000 until the approval period is expired.

- When the request is rejected, the regulation requires the company to pay the workers as per the new minimum wage number from the first day of the new minimum wage applied. Thus the company will need to pay the balance of payment retroactively as needed.

For example:

Previous year's minimum wage is Rp. 1,500,000,-

New minimum wage amount is Rp. 2,000,000,- starting January 1st 2013

Proposed wage amount of minimum wage postponement is Rp. 1,800,000,-

Approval/Rejection of postponement from Governor released on March 1st, 2013

If the postponement proposal is rejected:

Company will need to pay the balance amount of Rp, 500,000 per month in January and February 2013.

So the total payment in March will be :

Rp. 2,000,000 (new minimum wage) + Rp. 500,000 (balance amount in January 2013) + Rp. 500,000 (balance amount in February 2013) = Rp. 3,000,000.

The amount of wages from April 2013 onwards will remain as Rp. 2,000,000 as per the minimum wage applied in that year.

approval of minimum wage postponement. We will update our website once this information available

b. How Better Work Indonesia assessments see this case?

Better Work teams assess the factories compliance against National Law. Thus when a factory have received a legal approval of postponement of minimum wage, the factory will be rated as Comply in the field of minimum wage, provided that all the terms and condition as stated in the approval decree are applied in the factory such as number of workers and period of suspension. The Better Work team will include the information of suspension in the report accordingly.

Q: My factory has received an approval for suspension of minimum payment from Local Manpower and Transmigration office. I thought the suspension should come from the Governor. Does my factory comply with the law? How Better Work Indonesia team sees this?

There is a Governor Regulation back in 2007 that allow this practice for companies that have less than 1,000 workers. However, since this practice is not in accordance with Law No. 13 Year 2003 Article 89 subsection (3) as well as Minister Regulation No. 1 Year 1999 jo Minister Decree no. 226 Year 2000 on Minimum Wage , the Better Work Indonesia team will still rate the practice as non-compliance as per consultation with the Ministry of Manpower and Transmigration.
